In 2010 the Planning Inspectorate were required to reduce their spending by 35 per cent by 2014-15. That meant finding headline savings of around B£9 million per year. Planning Inspectorate's management board identified the removal of the ex gratia payment scheme which then had an annual budget of B£250,000 as a saving option. They decided to close the scheme. This report describes how that decision affected four complainants
